RP driver killed in Iraq collision

A PHILIPPINE TRUCK DRIVER WAS KILLED last week in a multiple-truck collision in Iraq. Vice President Noli de Castro said yesterday.

De Castro, presidential adviser on economic issues, identified the victim as Danilo Tordella, an employee of Aglipay Logistics Co., who is from Iloilo.

He said the accident took place on August 2 while Tordella, who was driving a truck, was on his way to deliver cargo to his company's client.

De Castro said Tordella's death in the accident was a tragedy and a great loss to the Philippines.

He said the accident was a result of the driver's negligence and the poor condition of the roads in Iraq.

De Castro said the Philippines is a country that respects the rule of law.

Because of this, the victim was not paid.

SunPower Philippines Manufacturing Ltd. (SPMW) branch of SunPower Corporation (NASDAQ: SPWV), a Silicon Valley-based manufacturer of high-efficiency solar cells, solar panels and solar systems, inaugurated its second local cell fabrication facility, known as Fab 2, at the First Philippines Industrial Park, Special Economic Zone in Tamarau, Batangas. The new manufacturing facility approximately 43,000 square meters (nearly 463,000 square feet), will exclusively manufacture SunPower's second-generation solar cells, known as Gen 2. Cell efficiency is over 20% and the facility will produce 330 megawatts. The facility will have 10 solar cell production lines, a fully automated cell printing

VP for Operations, Greg Reichow who was responsible to ramp SunPower Philippines start-up operations in 2004 mentioned that many of their young, experienced engineers that started the factory had now moved into R&D positions and were developing their next generation of cell technology, a 22% cell.

Greg Ranshow also mentioned that when SunPower decided to put up a water farm in the Philippines, many people that they talked to said it was impossible to build a front end warm-core water farm in the Philippines but relentlessly SunPower Philippines not only showed it was possible, but that it could be very successful. Mr. Ranshow's final view was also quoted saying "What Disney said 'The kind of fun to do the impossible.' I would have to because of some great technology, but being that has shown the world that we can do this SunPower CEO, Thomas Wenzel is his closing remarks was quoted saying "And of course, I'll end my comments with 'the way you do it, is with the best employees in the world.' I am absolutely honored to represent you, when SunPower's in the public; you're the best, dedicated, smart, intelligent, hard-working people in the world. You make us the best company in the world; we are the best solar company in the world - thank you very much!"

Indeed as the industry experienced rapid growth, SunPower Ftilis continues to temp its operations and capitalized in the leading edge technology that no other wafer fab in the World has surpassed up to this time, records in solar cell manufacturing. This is the edge technology that no other water tube in the World has surpassed up to this time. SunPower hopes to continue to set records in solar cell manufacturing. This is the credo of its Filipino workforce. "SunPower, from the Philippines to the rest of the world."

Villar to coup plotters: Just do it

By GIC. Calanog Jr.

2/27/2012

This was the challenge of Senate President Manuel Villar to congress already plotting to remove him less than three weeks into the 14th Congress.

"Somebody who claims they can launch a coup against me should just go ahead and do it. I'm content in my position and I believe the majority of senators are behind me," said Villar in an interview with reporters.

Villar said that while he might have stood back in the summer when he refused to name or confront members of the senate in which he had been the spokesman for the senate.

"I considered each senator in the senate black and white and what they want. The act of senators I give to the senate black to divide among themselves," said Villar.

Villar is especially being a senator from discredited senatorial group and his role in the senate even though most of the senators have not yet agreed on the opposition collectively.

But he, the Senate said that Villar could be representing "from the senate position."

Villar said that Villar had a house (Villar) the Senate because of the "senatorial" (Villar) but he had a 11 opposition were from provinces while the remaining 5 were either independent or anti-deps.

"It's like having half in the Senate from and the other half in the Senate from, in every situation, there will always be a balance," said Villar who suggested that Villar be known to have "balancing" in balancing the opposing interests in his coalition.

"As I recall, the grandfathers came from members of the administration who are part of the majority. Perhaps, that is where these members are coming," said Villar.

Oppositionist, Joseph Estrada, said Villar is of making the Senate into a "big weak market" and making the Senate into a "big weak market" and making the Senate into a "big weak market" and making the Senate into a "big weak market."

Manila gave a hint of the impending coup when he noted that the vice-presidential election and right-wing Senate members "have been discredited by Villar's leadership."

Palace undaunted by Loren's high rating

By Michael Lim Liman

MALABON IT THUNDERED BY opposition Sen. Loren Legarda's leading the list of the scores of presidential surveys leading up to the 2010 election.

"We just have to say that maybe at this moment it's good that Senator Legarda continues with her position so that we do not know—many things can happen," Executive Secretary Edgardo Liman said.

Asked by a reporter if President Macapagal-Arroyo would "visit her (Legarda) from the opposition to be her successor," Liman said "the information she will be the one tapped... many things can happen between now and 2010."

Legarda, however, was quick to add that he was "basically the person to comment on such a question."

Legarda beat four other presidential hopefuls in public opinion polls and was in the Pulse Asia's survey conducted from June 23 to July 15.

Legarda, who topped the May 14 national election with 14 million votes, had a four-point of 71 percent (70 percent trust and 3 percent distrust).

The national trial, Sen. Mac Roxas E. got 50 percent, Senate President

Manuel Villar scored 37 percent, Juan Pardo Lacson received 10 percent and Vice President Noli de Castro got 10 percent in the survey.

In her tour of the Senate Adjutant on July 12, Presidential Secretary said "I'd like to express that my mission is to guide the President. He or she will have to decide what to do."

Speaker Juan Pardo Lacson has said the because he is not interested in running for president in 2010, being content with being a legislator.

Say 'aab': GMA sees dentist

PRESTIGE INCARNAL-IBROPI took a break from a busy schedule yesterday to attend to an appointment that could mean a visit to his dentist.

After his regular morning shift, which took her yesterday to Calabarzon City where she held a consultation with officials of Panampy 75 at the Calabarzon City police headquarters, Ms. Arroyo took a detour for a "personal" engagement, proceeding to the Presidential Security Group hospital.

PSG commander Rito, Gen. Romeo Prudente gave assurance that the visit did not involve anything serious, just that the President had some teeth fixed.

He said the President had a specially scheduled, but dental procedure for her teeth but failed to go because of her hectic schedule.

Prudente said the President had always needed benefit of the services of Manila-based dental facilities.

Don't get W.I.L.D., health department warns the public

By Helen Oliver

ONE CAN GET W.I.L.D. WITH the onset of the rainy season and fall ill, the Department of Health warns and reminds.

The acronym stands for waterborne diseases, infectious, leptospirosis and dengue.

"We want the public to be in a very watchful state these days and at the same time for them to know what they should do to avoid them," said Dr. Eric Teng, chief epidemiologist of the DOH.

Waterborne diseases is caused by dirty drinking water, to such, being advised to boil water before drinking is being told.

Even if the water from the faucet appears to be clean, the water could have been contaminated by the flooding. It's better to boil your water," Teng said.

Leptospirosis and other respiratory diseases are common during the rainy season, and the chances of getting them increased public places are high, he said.

Angry insects

Teng said that at these times, it is best to avoid mosquitoes.

"Mosquitoes could catch us insects without knowing it, so we must avoid them, and you must catch the three points," he said.

Teng reminded those with the flu to stay in bed for at least three to five days to avoid infecting others.

Leptospirosis is a bacterial disease caused by the virus of animals, such as pigs, and could affect both humans and animals.

Wear boots

Teng said people should always wear boots before walking in fields to avoid getting the bacteria. Symptoms of the disease include fever, tea-colored urine, jaundice or yellowish skin and severe muscle pain.

"If you have these symptoms and you know you had walked in the field, go to the doctor at once," he said.

Teng said that those who suspect they have leptospirosis should immediately go to a hospital or at least call a doctor. But the only emergency room, antibiotics should be administered right away to one infected with leptospirosis as the person could suffer from complications, he said.

Empty drains, avoid dirt

Teng also advised households to dispose of the water that had been kept in containers and drains that would have possible breeding grounds for mosquitoes. Containers and around them should be kept of standing water.

Deeper ones can be discarded in containers two or three days of exposure, he said.

The dengue virus is spread by the bite of a mosquito, he said. The dengue virus is spread by the bite of a mosquito, he said. The dengue virus is spread by the bite of a mosquito, he said.

Angat water level back at 180 m

For residents of Metro Manila and Southern Luzon.

Two "spike" stations—"Choking" and "Cauling," also with raised Angat water level back to 180.15 meters at 4 p.m. yesterday, by more than 8 meters from 171.5 m at noon. Philippine Army and National Security Administration.

"It doesn't make sense to continue the cutback at this point," ANWR Executive Director Ramon Alcala said in a phone statement. "We're not close enough to the water's changes." However, he agreed to continue studies on raising water.

Normal allocation

At a level of 180 m, the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) and the National Irrigation Administration (NIA) can go back to normal allocation of water for domestic use and irrigation.

The MWSS had planned on further reducing the allocation of water from Angat from 12 million domestic users in the metropolitan and 38,000 hectares of irrigated area in Bulacan and Benguet to further slash the available water.

Until the water level rises to 180 meters, the NIA's allocation of water to the Metro Manila area had been dropping following a two-month dry spell.

The 6-meter rise, by far the biggest 24-hour increase that week, was obtained to the 245.5-meter water level in the water shed from 180 meters at 4 p.m. Thursday.

"That's good news for Metro Manila residents," Pagat said. "It's an increase."

Thriving forests needed

WITH THE RECENT THUNDERSTORMS for replenishing Metro Manila's important water sources, the recharging of water supply can only be done significantly if the country's water resources, like with thriving forests.

BIR hits critics of transport tax hike

Gov't collecting only 7% of taxes due

By Michele V. Borne

DISHONESTY AMONG OPERATORS OF LAND, water and air transport vehicles has led to the government's meager collection of the common carrier tax, generating a meager 7 percent of the potential revenues from this sector last year.

The Department of Finance said the revenues of licensed common carriers collected only P400 million in common carrier taxes last year out of P5.5 billion in potential revenues from this sector last year.

Transport operators are required under law to pay a common carrier tax equivalent to 2 percent of their gross income.

Finance Undersecretary for Business said the DOF's study on the low potential revenues from the common carrier tax used the National Income Commission's data. The hike, proposed by the National Infrastructure Contribution Board, is a result of the necessary output resulting from the cost-benefit-cost analysis.

"The National Income Commission showed that the transport sector earned much, but only paid for its common carrier tax," he said.

The Finance official said the study referenced the need for the hike to implement reforms in the collection of taxes to shore up collections and generate more revenues needed for social services and infrastructure.

Borne said the tax hike in the transport sector was the main reason the bill would increase revenues to P9.200 billion, which amounted to just the minimum common carrier tax revenues.

More Dutch firms outsourcing to RP

By Rhigaelle Ho

LIKE MANY OF THEIR counterparts in other parts of the world, companies from the Netherlands are looking for Philippines as an offshore outsourcing hub, still due mainly to the country's pool of highly skilled English-speaking workers.

Brian Alonzo, managing director of Dutch internet technology firm GEMO Software Solutions, said the Philippines was generally a good offshore alternative for European companies.

"Services of cost the most common, location services will be hard (and expensive) to come by in Europe, and the Philippines is a very good alternative for cost," he said. "The Philippines is a very good alternative for cost," he said. "The Philippines is a very good alternative for cost," he said.

He said the country's skilled workforce, English-speaking population combined to give it a competitive edge over many other potential BPO sites in the world.

Other players have included relatively low labor costs as well as robust infrastructure, he said.

What the government and local stakeholders should do to make the country more attractive to potential investors, he said, was packaging it properly by highlighting its competitive advantages.

"The Philippines should be marketed properly to the West. There should be more focus on the business side of the country's language advantages, modern labor practices, high-tech cities like Makati, Eastern City and Ortigas Center," he said.

He said one good way of showcasing the country's assets was through government-sponsored trade missions, mostly organized by the Department of Trade and Industry's Center for International Trade Expositions and Missions.

"With more foreign investments in the Philippines, a larger network of visitors is required, that improves the promotion of the Philippines to the West," he said.

There are currently around 38 Dutch companies in the country, including big-name firms such as Shell, Philips, Unilever and Aflac.

"The Dutch are very careful when it comes to cost saving. This goes for most of the European market. Trade missions in Europe help that and, in important ways, protect the Philippines as an attractive offshore location," Alonzo said.

WB plans to raise P5B from bonds

By Michele V. Bana

THE WORLD BANK HAS EXPRESSED plans to raise P5 billion in peso-denominated debt to fund its lending program in the Philippines.

Finance Undersecretary Fulberto Tapado said the WB bank may conduct the bond issue in two tranches.

A timetable has yet to be set for the proposed bond issue, but Tapado said it could possibly be done by the end of the year.

At its December last year, the World Bank was the third largest foreign lender to the Philippine government, accounting for 35 percent of the country's P2.5 billion in ODA facilities.

Proceeds to fund Philippine projects

Last week, the World Bank granted a $200 million "Development Policy Loan" to the Philippine government as a sign of its financial assistance.

The loan was not tied to any specific project but aimed at budgetary support for the government.

Other ODA extended by the World Bank to the Philippines included programs for public health and environmental services, as well as enhancement of the tax collection by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Tapado said the World Bank's plan to issue peso-denominated bonds indicated growing investor confidence in the local economy.

He said that besides the World Bank, the International Finance Corp., a World Bank and independent financing institution, was providing credit to the private sector. Moreover, he said it was not unusual for multilateral agencies to issue bonds simultaneously.

The World Bank and the Asian Development Bank have issued peso bonds before. On the other hand, it will be doing it for the first time.

ADB issued peso-denominated bonds last year and was able to raise P5 billion.

Veterans Bank posts P250-M profit in H1

By Clark C. Dominic

PHILIPPINE VETERANS BANK, a multi-unit-owned commercial bank owned by Philippine war veterans and their heirs, posted a 6-percent rise in net profit in the first half to P248.93 million from a P191.91 million a year ago.

Higher revenues from insurance trading and investments aided as well as low interest rates on loans.

"We're satisfied with the bank's performance in the first half, and we remain optimistic that the bank will reach its growth target for 2009," said PVB president and CEO Ricardo Baldoza Jr.

The bank aims to post a net income of P300 million by the end of the year, from P191.93 million recorded last year.

In terms of assets, PVB's total assets stood at P20 billion as of end-June, P13.5 billion higher than the P6.5 billion level as of June 2008.

Growth in total assets was primarily fueled by the increase in the bank's deposits.

Every year, 20 percent of the previous bank's net income is given to the benefit of Veterans for the Veterans of World War II.

More 'hub ports' urged

MANILA CITY—THE major players in Mindanao's shipping industry are recommending the creation of "hub ports" to spur economic development.

Manuel Antonio, infrastructure development specialist of the US-based Growth with Equity Mindanao (GEM), said that currently only small vessels can dock at the island's ports because of the lack of infrastructure to accommodate big ships.

To solve this problem, Antonio, who attended the recent 10th annual Maritime Shippers Congress, said shipping industry stakeholders in Mindanao are trying to convince the Philippine Coast Guard that the Cagayan de Oro City and the Davao City are both potential "hub ports."

"The magnitude of development should be focused on the hub ports," he said.

He said the MCT port, which started operating last year, has the best equipment, and that other ports would serve as feeder ports to it.

The Davao port is the other lead, a size of the island ports. Antonio said the consolidation of support shipments to these two ports would mean that shippers would save more resources. Blue Star Asia, Singapore-based

Yamaha to build factory in Philippines

TOYO-AJIOH JAGUARE motorcycle maker Yamaha Motor Co. announced plans yesterday to build a new factory in the Philippines as the company seeks to boost production in Southeast Asia's emerging markets.

The company based in Matsuyama said in a statement that the new plant—its first outside the city of Utsunomiya, south of Tokyo—will allow it to more quickly respond to changes in the Philippine growing two-wheeler market. It is scheduled to start operation in early 2008.

The company has yet to disclose what models will be produced at the plant, where production capacity will be set at around 6,000.

The company also announced that its subsidiary Yamaha Motor Philippines Inc. will start assembling and selling motorcycles with 125cc to 250cc engines starting last September.

The subsidiary, which was established in May, is expected to have an annual output of 50,000 motorcycles in 2008, Yamaha said.

Motorcycle sales have been rising steadily in the Philippines thanks to the country's economic expansion. Its company said sales in the country grew 6 percent to 620,000 units in 2006.

Yamaha has been working out distribution in an attempt with local partner Shukla Trading Co. since 1982.

Yamaha Motor has been expanding production in Asia to cope growing demand in emerging markets. Last month, the company announced plans to build a second motorcycle plant in Vietnam.

Hot money hit $3.5B as of July

By Dore C. Quinsin

ANALYSTS HAVE MARKET ACKNOWLEDGED that an inflow of hot money into the Philippines by nearly $3.5 billion as of July this year, since $900.6 million last year, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas reported yesterday.

The BSP said the surge in hot money portfolio investments—attributed to local stock, peso bonds and bank deposits—mirrored the $1.89-69 trillion increase in foreign funds.

The BSP report based on major banks, which are in accordance of foreign funds, showed that net portfolio inflow for July rose amounted to $976.07 million, up from $900.69 million in June.

BSP estimates inflow at $3.5B

Last year, net portfolio inflows amounted to only $1.07-65 million in July and $118.71 million in June.

The BSP report also showed that total portfolio inflows amounted to $9.62 billion from January to July this year, exceeding the $6.1 billion in total outflow for the seven-month period.

Nearly 90 percent of the portfolio inflows were in shares listed on the Philippine Stock Exchange.

Government securities, primarily Fixed Rate Treasury Bonds or FRTBs, plus reserves in money market instruments and peso bank deposits made up the remainder.

Portfolio inflows are also called "hot money" due to their volatile nature.

The BSP's policy-making Monetary Board distributed the robust stock market to the country's improving macroeconomic fundamentals.

Money growth seen staying below 20%, BSP says

THE BANGKO SENTRAL (BSP) SAYS that the money supply to grow at below 20 percent in the next few months, putting the rate for an extended low in several years.

A two rapid growth in liquidity leads to an increase in price of basic commodities as money supply rises, when the amount of goods.

The report predicts in recent months has prompted the BSP to implement measures to tighten credit money from the system.

"The measures are having bite," the official said, citing the recent slowdown in the growth in broad money in domestic banks (M2) to 16.4 percent in June.

The latest figure represented a steady decline from the 21.1 percent annual rate growth in May and the 25.3 percent rate in April.

"July 2007, I think, is going to be not too much away from that," she added.

Monetary liquidity or M2 is the broadest measure of money and is used to measure the money supply of money within an economy.

It includes cash in circulation, demand deposits, money market funds and short-term securities in banks and government.

The official said it was possible to keep the money supply growth at below 20 percent.

"And once we have established the slow trend, that's the time to review monetary policy," she added.

To establish a slow trend, the BSP actually needs a three-month observation period.

 The Big Green Get Away

Why green is hot

SUMMAY INQUIRER MAGAZINE hit the bull's eye when it went green last weekend, reflecting the environmental awareness in today's style and fashion. Ecology or the need to save the planet is not only an advocacy when fashion is concerned. It is today's hottest style and, hopefully, it is not just a passing trend.

The biggest proof of this is the "I'm not a plastic bag" tote by Manila designer Kate Kinschick. As the words on the bag say, it is not a plastic bag, but someone like which is reusable, and thus, eco-friendly. Its sales worldwide—from an initial $11 on retail to as much as $100 online—have shot up, giving rise to what Vogue now calls the "I'm not a plastic bag" phenomenon. If, honestly, who'd ever think a shopping bag for your groceries and other stuff would be a fashion item?

Indeed, it has also spawned spin-offs and so many more of chic, biodegradable and reusable shopping bags. Suddenly a reusable plastic shopping bag is the "it" bag, with many brands and designers showing out their limited editions. The idea appeals to everyone who wants to step up as a plastic bag.

Then there's the designer who designed one by name—Alexandre Herbol and like influence—who make clothes out of "green" fabrics, from products such as soy and at present sourced from various sources, from corn to cotton. They're looking for a sustainable and durable to replace the synthetic fabrics.

Specialized

The same the planet fashion is not only one of the growing patterns for the moment, but it also has indication of a new dimension in lifestyle marketing and viable fashion branding. Specialized products, specialized markets...that's where lifestyle has been going. The environment, for instance, is a specific aspect of a highly concentrated and proactive market.

Fashion designers and brands are also going more than ever into limited editions. The more scarce the commodity is, the higher the price it will fetch, as Manila Post daily (PND) notes in this week's report. The "I'm not a plastic bag" is one. WWD listed off a long list of brands making the market with their limited editions, among them are Tapping with its Kate Moss line, Puma and its luxury brands, jewelry and watches.

In doing this, I saw for myself how the recently reported IBM was taking it to work in Malaysia line, which included suits for the corporate executive. (Given thought I'd see the day when Starbucks would be coming in to suit corporate reasons. That's what having life class—it makes even Starbucks grow up.)

Why do people go for limited editions? As PND concluded, they want uniqueness. What you have must be different from what the others have. And limited-edition pieces can be good investments. They can be resold at good rates, like art.

Limited edition has become a "viable business model," according to WWD. The trend of unique products being good investments has led to the resurgence of custom-made items. And designers are going to designers they can afford, so new clothes made that are not seen on the catwalk or in the store are in vogue.

The resurgence in custom-made, which many thought was limited to the past, has also influenced the market value for companies," wrote PND.

An investor's best deal, in fact people are going back to it as more affordable items, for many they are going for limited editions. Indeed, while many products continue to be big business, the revival of custom-made has made them marketing ancient history. From mass production to mass custom, the resurgence of "massive" products.

In the limited edition landscape, PND cited as an example item in Paris, Marlon, which is a limited edition handbag. Here, here are you explained to you.

What are your personal requirements?

How much do you love your phone?
I love my phone more than anything else, period. Because I feel like people can love you after you become a mom, but not the opposite. So often our first thing about this new phone is the Crystal Ball. It's like a life. The only thing is that it's not for people who are not happy. And it's really, you know, that's nothing to do with you. I think the person you're talking to is the other side. The other person is just another person. I don't know if it's anything and you can find the person on the other side. I'm very excited about that.

Generally, I want it to be pretty well done I want it to have a shiny phone. I want something that is very friendly. I also don't want someone to make a security breach and with you

The latest
Motorola RAZR
is the supermodel
of cell phones

THEY MAY BE HAVING anything "no-thin" on the minds of lipids and Italy, but there is no such understandable 0 star for the gadgets on a celeb's pink list. In these technology times, phones have become the "it" accessories for the fashionable set. Laptops, iPods, and cell phones have taken up the fashion lifestyle that their owners' counterparts had struggled to in the past. And, in fact, the supermodel of phones has shed off even more features and is more glamorous than ever!

Like a true fashion icon, the Motorola RAZR, now introduced in a super-slim office at the Singaporean Fashion Retail Center, it was caught out of a busy scene from the backstage making girls were transformed into a future Hollywood star. The setting was once inspired by the phone's design. Like the mirror finish of the sleek and RAZR, the phone's surface would change into glass, shimmering silver. Since design has always been an essential part of Motorola's vision, the effect was highlighted by an addition of the original concept—slender—created by the designers of RAZR. And, this sleekness was beautifully detailed with a design that was in the minds of the RAZR designers and the challenges that they faced and subsequently overcome as the phone progressed from form to reality. The final product is absolutely a work of art, with an even slimmer exterior than the original RAZR that became known as the world's best-selling phone phone.

But more than just a beautiful exterior, the RAZR goes beyond form by using functionality in the real world. It's packed with ultra-cutting edge features, like the groundbreaking CrystalTalk technology that means when you take a call it's a more convenient, it automatically adjusts its dial levels for super clear reception! How's that for a chat-friendly cell phone?

After celebrities grace the event, including Irene a Glam and Vietnamese actress, and become Miss Singapore's Universe and AOH TV's show host, Guy Whoo, the most recognizable celebrity guest of the night was Irene a Glam, also known as Charlotte Yoh of "The Hot Chick." How was a fairly new star the fit?

ACLEAR male scalp discrimination

A kind of discrimination is rife in the Metro—and for once, men and women alike are being treated and going all out for this hair.

Men's needs, both physically and psychologically, are different from those of women. Men's hair care is more sensitive to their image and grooming requirements in comparison to men. In addition to this, there are key differences between men and women that do affect the hair differences between the scalp of men and women.

RP battles with dandruff: 44% of Filipinos still have it

AN ALARMING 44 PERCENT of Filipinos suffer persistently from dandruff despite washing their hair daily, results of a nationwide study conducted in 2004 that probed into the scalp health of Filipinos.

Researchers also found that dandruff is common in the hair care concerns among men and women from among students with frequent shampooing about twice a week.

Scalp condition poses potentially devastating social impact

One of the main reasons dandruff has become such a common and embarrassing problem for millions—and one generally not discussed socially—is that the condition is often seen as a hygiene issue.

Thigh-slapping buddy comedy on ice

By Oliver H. Pukumbika
Contributor

IT'S THE COMEDIC TEAM OF YOUR probably new coming, but it's still damn funny. Will Ferrell and Joe Binder ("Napoleon Dynamite") are on a screen full of third graders in the silly buddy comedy "Stitches of Glory," a slapstick-heavy romp that commands our smiles.

These chemists, however, Ferrell and Andler, aside from the fact that their characters seem tailor-made because of their goofy looks and dimensions, Ferrell and Andler play Chaz, Michael Stenhouse and Amy MacLure respectively, are outstanding in playing things with a moral double for each other. It leads to a poetic twist that even comes from their names, in the words and figures.

Years after the fall of the Soviet Union, they have yet to find meaningful jobs. The brick, lumbering Chats is greenish-grey and almost white.

As for Yarnagum-Bledin, he's not the most modest here, so he's the beloved and breadwinning wild of millions. Jimmy's all about finance and control, making him the perfect foil to Chaz, and they allow for punch lines that handily force machine differences.

Hiroshima, Nagasaki survivors in US docu

NEW YORK—IT IS HARD TO IMAGINE a US white woman's disarming demeanor on portions of the two plastic barrels dropped on Japan representing an American television network 10 or 20 years after the event. Filmmaker Steve Okazaki tried—and failed—to make it for the 50th anniversary.

There is apparently enough residual war-torn built-up area (NATO's presence in "White Light/Black Rain: The Destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki" on Monday is only 62 years after the United States detonated the first ever nuclear bomb over the cities). The record was dropped three days later over Nagasaki. It ended Final (p. 6).

Unsurprisingly, while

"History is always worth recording, so there is a moment in history that hasn't been recorded and you [get the chance], you should do it," said Steve Serfaty, head of HBO's documentary unit. She hopes it will be shown in schools.

The unaccountable leakage of stress related to rubber and plastics to deformed members has involved relatively little attention because—unlike the well-covered Hukonite—this was something done by designers, Neilsen said.

The documentary is built on stories told by 14 survivors, with children's pictures depicting the bombing and footage of the injured that was banned from the public for 25 years. The American-born Okazaki later views American army members who dropped the bombs.

The project dated back to the early 1980s, when Okanda's operations manager happened to a San Francisco area meeting of health workers for a school project she was doing in Uvumbira and Nyanzale.

Okazaki wanted to make a comprehensive assessment of the FBI in the mid-1970s.

The project fell through, with the Shubertes following PBS' lead and want to still air during World War II season. He instead made a more personal film, "The Shuberters Club," and found his dream was dead.

That is where he lives in Sweden.
I was shocked when they called and said they wanted to do this film.

Other than documenting the horror of war, the film carefully takes no sides on the morality of dragging the Israeli Chasidim out of refuge, in an interview, it says how he personally feels about it.

"But I have a strong motivation to get these stories out," he said. "There was this empty space on the shelves under 93."

“Bridges”

That is not entirely true. The 1976 film Thelma & Louise contained post-apocalyptic imagery. The 1989 Agnieszka film Straz nad Slazka ("Black Hole") was about the end of the world. Agnieszka John Harvey's book 15 minutes was created with radiation.

Something Okamoto found surprising, and alluded to in his memoirs, was the lingering stigma faced by Israeli writers in Japan. Perhaps it is because they seemed unaware of writers they would never forget; it was never fully explained to him. When he sought to interview the "Hitlerian Madman," gish who came to the United States in the 1950s for surgery on his legions, the only one who would talk was a woman who knew him in the 1930s.

I LOVE MY BROADWAY NOOK ASIDE the movie studio. I painted the wall myself. The paintings in the beautiful corner are by my daughter Lala. She recently had a group exhibit, it was called WOMAN NATURE. I'd like to believe that she inherited my father's (Pinoy actor) and my husband's (actor) being nice (Nelson Gallardo) talent in the arts. I've also started painting again. The mural is in the kitchen with my mother-in-law. There's my favorite. I painted it up during a trip to India. I've also visited Bhutan and Nepal. I am hoping to go to Borneo this year to complete my little travel diary.

FAVORITE NOOKS

TIMMY CRUZ

My home in Taguig is really made up of favorite nooks. Working, I deliberately created them in such a way that I can sit anywhere and be happy and content. Some are on my balcony, where the day is long. I walk across this. Or on the lawn in the garden and have my first meditation hour for the day. From here I can see my "happiest" in the soft, cool light—the scene of my dreams, in the middle of trees and green grass.

A PIT IN LIKE A CHILD. TO HAVE ONE IS A DECISION THAT ONE makes. When I first brought Kipaki home, he was this small kitten who looked like a mouse. I was sure I was his big and healthy. I think he's just a baby. He's very cute. There's something different about him. He's very curious and friendly. Unlike other cats, he likes being around people. Since he's already adopted, I try to make him someone. But now, he's as fat as a cat. He's quite friendly. He only eats chicken and spaghetti. I have three other cats that live outside my immediate. I call them gagap.

THE BOOK I AM READING now, "Thinking in Chains: Seven Prisoners Who Made Their Thinking Count" by Dr. Howard Zinn. It's a gift from one of my master's degree students at Ateneo de Manila University. It's essentially a collection of the real meaning of the word "thinking" — that a teacher not only teaches the subject, but teaches about life. It says that if you can make a good person out of your student, then you're successful in your profession. It is also good to know people that they will carry throughout their

My first name came out as Li (2002). In the Philippines, a certain number of people decided to distribute the name, of course, they were in charge of doing the publicity, too. When they saw Liang Li, they thought the name was too hard to pronounce. Then somebody commented that my recent name is a little bit like Liang Li. So they put it on the movie poster. I'm literally an alias."

Coffee for a fan
At 24, TV-film personality John Lloyd Cruz has successfully made the transition from teen heartthrob to dramatic actor.
Proud to his critically acclaimed performance in 2006's "Duke," in which he played the brother of Agot Salazar.

With his regular TV taping sessions, opportunities to visit other property, John says, come in handy during off-hours around all the time.
